

TORONTO, February 18, 2011 –

S l a v e r y

B o n d a g e

S e r v i t u d e

On Thursday April 28th 2011, during the Alternative Fashion Week held in Toronto as part of the 6th annual Fashion Arts Toronto [FAT] cavalcade - Art will take a stand.

See how the creative minds in Toronto's Fashion and Arts communities come together to show support and combat injustice. Watch how the Arts transform the unthinkable notion of Human Trafficking-Modern Day Slavery into creative and visual displays.

[FAT] teams up with the non-profit organization [free-them] to publicly display what Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation looks like in the open, outside the veil of secrecy

Be on hand, to meet the founder of [free-them] Shae Invidiata, to hear the stories and to hear how art is playing a role to [free-them].

About [free-them].

[free-them] was officially founded in 2010, by Founder and Human Rights activist Shae Invidiata, [free-them] is an initiative to partner with people, organizations, & businesses to fight human trafficking -- the modern slave trade. For the past eight years, Shae has been fighting the epidemic of Human Trafficking in Canada and around the world. [free-them] is dedicated to raising awareness and funds to abolish global human trafficking.

For more information about [free-them] and their ongoing efforts please visit their website at www.freethem.ca